

Life and Work #1

Sooner or later, everyone needs to find a job. Never mind (Eventually, after some time) (Ignore, do not think about) what some people say—a good job is very important to being happy in life.

Good jobs are few and far between and are difficult to find when you are in a (unusual, not very often) (have little) hurry. But in the long run, the time you spend is worth it. Before looking for a time, in a rush) (eventually) job, you need to keep in touch with employers who have openings for people with your (be in contact with) skills. This means you must look day in and day out using many sources, like the (continuously, all the time)

newspaper, help wanted signs and ads placed at the employment office.

Keeping a good job also takes a lot of effort. Often, you have to put up with (to tolerate, unhappily)

people you don't like. And being disrespectful to the boss is, of course, accept) out of the question. As a matter of fact, employers say that it is most important that (impossible) (Really, actually)

their employees get along with one another.
(to work well with)

If you have a job that you do not like, only you can decide what to do. You can either stay and make the best of it, or you can leave for a better job. But (do the best one can in a bad situation)

if you leave or stay, keep your eyes open for opportunities and take advantage (to use well, to profit of them as often as possible. You never know what the future will bring.
